This Photoshop tutorial will show you how to create custom borders for a customer sign, just as if you were hired by the business to do the job. You will learn how to create the necessary files and the design in Photoshop, as well as how to composite and apply Photoshop layers to ensure that you produce the desired results. Introduction to Photoshop Sign Borders As a beginner, Photoshop is an excellent tool to create a basic sign with a custom border. You have the ability to create a sign with just a handful of steps and add a border to make it look professional. Photoshop is very user-friendly, and it's extremely easy to customize the appearance of your sign. You will have the opportunity to change color and shape, such as making it taller or shorter. In this tutorial, you will learn how to: Create a background image Sketch out the design Create shapes and edit the line weight Add a text layer and add additional text Create a copy layer and apply a shape and color to it Create a unique border for your sign Make your custom sign My sign tutorial You will find all of the design files for this sign in the download file. Feel free to customize the design as you desire to make your sign your own. 1. Select a base image that you'd like to use for this sign. For this tutorial, I will use an image that I have taken from the web. I will show you how to change your image's color and contrast. Then, I will add a text layer that I will use to create a headline. 2. Click on the "Edit" tool and select a brush from the tool bar. I will use "Soft Round, #0044A4, 20pt" as my first brush. Holding down the "Shift" key while clicking will let you create a selection using your brush. 3. This brush will create the shape of the border. By holding the "Alt" key, you can change the brush's size and direction. To change the size and direction of this brush, you will have to click the handles around the brush, or simply drag the line you wish to change. To change the size of this brush, you will have to change the number after the "pt." 4. For this tutorial, you will need to increase the size of the brush, and you will also need to make the brush rounder. As

Welcome to the Theatre of Life, a blog on teeming life in human and other communities. The local, global, and weird stuff of Rensselaer, New York, USA. Editor: Michael Rahmany, Ph.D. These days I share more of the blog with some of my local colleagues in the MIT Center for Civic Media, but the blog still functions as an occasional open-access journal. All are welcome to read the posts and comment. The views expressed on this blog are my own. Friday, April 11, 2009 Theatre of Life #13: An Interview with Ledy VanKavage, Resident of Bottom's Up Productions Ledy VanKavage is the Resident Producer of Bottom's Up Productions, a locally-based non-profit performing arts organization, now staging three different plays a year in the playhouse next to my apartment. I see Ledy every few days as we both live in the Theater District. I often ask her what she's been up to and here's our latest chat: Michael Rahmany: What's the name of the play that you're directing right now? Ledy VanKavage: "The Wild Party", which is a play by Noel Coward. The show begins previews on April 14th, opens on May 1st and ends on May 27th. It's been in the off-off-off Broadway space on W. 41st St. in the West Village since last June and is now in its 3rd year there. It's a big hit, but not an easy show to stage since it's full of sex and nudity. It doesn't have a set or anything other than a few chairs and some glasses and plates from the apartment. With that said, I give you... The Playhouse, The Upper West Side of Manhattan 150 W. 41st St. New York, NY 10024 Length: 2 Hours Let's Take The Stage! Effect of irradiation dose and local anesthetic on neuromuscular blockade induced by an amide-type local anesthetic. The effects of irradiation dose and local anesthetic on the neuromuscular blockade (NMB) induced by a potent local anesthetic in the peripheral nerve has been studied in the rat phrenic nerve-diaphragm preparation. An amide-type local anesthetic (QX-314) caused a dose-dependent blockade with a small IC50 value of 13 microM, at the neuromuscular junction (NMJ), and 16 microM in the proximal part of the motor axon. Both blockades was reversible upon re-exposure to QX-314 after a 2-hr interval. The time course of reversal was independent of the drug concentration (14-140 microM) used, and was equal in non-irradiated as well as in irradiated preparations. Increasing the irradiation dose (from 5 to 10 or 15 Gy) had no effect on the potency of the block at the NMJ, but significantly increased the local anesthetic potency of QX-314 in the muscle, and decreased the block at the NMJ by about 20% in the irradiated preparations. Increasing the dose of QX-314 from 14 to 28 microM, but not the dose of local anesthetic, also affected the block at the NMJ. Our findings suggest that the elimination of presynaptic action of local anesthetics may be one of the mechanisms behind the acute toxicity of QX-314.#-*- coding: utf-8 -*- """GSPii VPN Server auth handler.""" from __future__ import absolute_import, unicode_literals from gs_vpns_gspii.hac_service_vpn import GspiiServiceVpnHandler, GspiiServiceVpnExtensionError """ The authentication handler handles configuring and deploying VPNs.
