Most patients with adrenocortical carcinoma (ACC) and adrenocortical adenomas (ACA) have been reported to have a Cushing's syndrome with a 'Cushingoid' body-shape. Cortisol, ACTH and serum levels of aldosterone and potassium are usually increased. Several studies have shown that the pathophysiological basis for the syndrome is the lack of glucocorticoid-receptor (GR) function in ACTH-independent and in ACA. Patients with ACCs and ACTH-dependent adenomas have elevated basal cortisol levels. GR mRNA and protein have been detected by in situ hybridization and Western blotting, respectively, in the ACTH-dependent ACTH-producing adenomas and ACA. Functional GR was characterized by steroid binding 77a5ca646e
