I would like to include a UISearchController inside a UITableViewCell. The problem is that when I do this, the search bar doesn't respond to touch and I would like it to. I have tried this in cellForRowAtIndexPath and in viewDidLoad. In cellForRowAtIndexPath, if I use viewWithTag to identify the UISearchView I get a search bar, but when I try to set the tag to the search bar I get "fatal error: unexpectedly found nil while unwrapping an Optional value" Here is a example of what I did. I wanted to have a search bar inside a table row. With my current code, the application does not crash but the search bar is not responsive. What do I need to change to make this work? override func viewDidLoad() { super.viewDidLoad() let tableView = UITableView(frame: view.frame) tableView.isScrollEnabled = false tableView.dataSource = self tableView.delegate = self tableView.registerClass(UITableViewCell.self, forCellReuseIdentifier: "cell") searchController = UISearchController(searchResultsController: nil) searchController.searchResultsUpdater = self searchController.hidesNavigationBarDuringPresentation = false // This causes the error: fatal error: unexpectedly found nil while unw 3e33713323$
