Who does Photoshop? I've seen a lot of people saying the designers and photographers are the ones that use Photoshop, but I'm going to go a step further and say that it's people who need to edit images who create new high quality images, and those who need to create new awesome memes. There are tons of tools out there for editing and generating images. They come in all shapes and sizes, and lots of them are free. After using a lot of them myself, I've put together a list of the best free software for editing and creating images. Photo editing and graphics creation tools The photo editor can be used to remove imperfections from portraits and brighten the image. It can be used to format text, crop the image and change the font and color. It has lots of features to edit images and change the look, feel and feel of the image. It has a nice little palette of layers that can be used to blend images together, add effects, adjust brightness, or switch from color to black and white. These are the things you can do with the free version of Photoshop: It has support for 12-bit graphics and unlimited layers It has a pretty sophisticated undo function (as the name implies) The interface is streamlined and easy to use It comes in a number of different languages It can convert RAW files to Photoshop format It can help you open the image in Photoshop and make sure you can actually open it It has a built-in photo editor It's very configurable Pros: It's free It comes with some nice tools to edit photos You can use it on almost any computer Cons: It's not as intuitive as Photoshop It's not ideal for serious photo editing You can't export the image to Photoshop It doesn't convert the image from RAW to Photoshop Drew's Favorite: The classic image editing program: PhotoShop. Why Use Photoshop? Xander Martin to make return to MotoGP next week Xavier Simeon is bringing a MotoGP return to the British Grand Prix at Silverstone next week. The former Moto2 champion will race aboard his Moriwaki Suzuki bike in the BSB event. Simeon finished ninth in his BSB debut in April and fourteenth in May in the Honda Cup. His best race was two down in the Moto2 BSB on the Honda-powered Marc VDS Honda Suter team, finishing sixth. The 24-year-old replaces fellow Belgian Alex Debono at the factory Moriwaki Suzuki outfit, which is run by Max Neukirchner. He's set for the two-day event in the UK, which takes place on June 22 and 23. Simeon will share the No. 3 Moriwaki Suzuki GSV-R with Marco Melandri and Augusto Farfus, who will be making his GP debut this weekend. Silverstone is a poor track for Suzuki. A middle-ranking performance in 2013, one which saw the team finish in 11th place and with no points scoring. 14th last year, with two points, wasn't much better. It is a track the Suzuki GSV-R has been particularly weak at. Simeon is a fitting rider to return to the series. The Belgian was Moriwaki's Moto2 team mate in the 2017 season and finished fifth in the title race. He's raced in Moto2 since 2015, but hasn't been able to break into the world's top-tier since 2016. Moriwaki has three MotoGP riders lined up for next season. Aleix Espargaro and Jack Miller will share the No. 4 Honda at the start of the year. Leonidas, who currently sits 11th in the Moto2 standings, will be joined by Hungarian Marc De Vico on the factory Honda No. 8. Coincidentally, the events take place at Silverstone, just a stone's throw from the stadium circuit where Espargaro will race next week. In similar fashion, Simeon and Esteban Gutiérrez will race on the same street. In the BSB series the two are four-time winners. The Moto2 champion will start from pole position on Saturday, while Gutiérrez will be set to start from

Q: How to change visibility of a datagridview column? how to change the visibility of a column? When i click a button i want to make all the column data visible. I dont want to show the column header. please help. thank you i added the code. but it does not work. `foreach (DataGridViewColumn col in dgv.Columns) { if(col.Name == dgv.Columns(0)) { col.Visible=true; } }` A: It's best to just get rid of the header altogether: `foreach (DataGridViewColumn col in dgv.Columns) { col.Visible = false; } foreach (DataGridViewRow row in dgv.Rows) { row.Visible = false; }` This will get rid of the columns but not the header. You could change the headers and rename them in each loop if you want to keep that. A: Following shapti60's answer, here's the code to hide all rows and columns other than the first row and first column. `foreach (DataGridViewColumn col in dgv.Columns) { col.Visible = false; }`
