There are numerous VPN apps out there that allow you to securely browse the web and send data over an encrypted connection. Some of the best options are VPN clients that run on your computer, like Tunnelblick or Hotspot Shield. VPN clients work by making your device believe it is connected to a VPN server, and all your data travels over this secure connection, making it virtually impossible for anyone or anything to intercept or see what you are doing. But VPN apps aren't just for computer users. There are some VPN clients that are specifically designed for iPhone, iPad, and Android devices, and some are even designed for use with Roku, Amazon Fire TV, and Xbox One. VPN apps are a great way to protect your privacy, but are not necessarily safe to use as they do connect your device to a remote server. These connections can easily be intercepted, logged, and monitored. In some cases, a VPN can also expose you to phishing attempts and other cyber attacks. That is why you need a VPN
