Advanced Autoclicker (from isokontakt) deals with tasks which would normally be very boring or even considered impossible (like clicking in a game time and time again on a button you don't want to click on). It is very user friendly and easy to use. - Emma Khalka- I really like the program for two reasons. Firstly, it isn't pretty and flashy, but very functional. The interface is great, the UI/UX is easy to use and well thought out, and it runs in the background without needing to be open. The second reason is that while I am using it (and it does exactly what I need it to, which is very much the usual case) I feel so calm I can't even use the word "productive". It just feels good to be doing something that is useful, yet doesn't require me to worry about a display, a keyboard, or other distractions. - Jonas Åderman- Very useful if you want to be able to click the same button a lot, and I don't mean the 'ok' button, even though that would work. The Google Chrome but, if you are thinking of using it for playing games, use the Play Store, so you can get the free version on all the devices you have, and buy the Pro version for platforms you play games on. - Gerald Mamegne- The voice of reason: someone actually doing what I need to do, without making me deal with the hassle

What's New in the Advanced Autoclicker?

Advanced Autoclicker is a free software that helps you click on every mouse button as much as you like. When you set the program to auto click all mouse buttons whenever you are idle, everything else will be automated for you. Advanced Autoclicker software is an alternative to the so-called Task scheduler built into Windows. You can schedule multiple tasks as well as run them in a different order than the ones specified as it is possible with task scheduler. Advanced Autoclicker runs as a background service and does not consume any resources from your system. Advanced Autoclicker is also portable, as it can be installed on any system. The user interface of the application is very simple, which means that even people with zero experience with computer applications can use the program without any problems.
