Modern Warfare 3 sounds like the fast-paced, skill-intensive first-person shooter that fans of the series have demanded. Infinity Ward and Sledgehammer Games will build on the foundation that we all feel has already been established and provided in the previous titles in the series. This new title will use the next-gen power of Xbox 360 and Sony's PlayStation 3 to build a new type of multiplayer experience that will both showcase the power of the Xbox 360 and PlayStation 3 and give fans the ultimate first-person shooter experience, and plenty of fun for everyone. Modern Warfare 3 will be the first game in the franchise to support online multiplayer for up to 60 players. There will be a few variations on the theme of the game, with no less than seven maps that will have the player roaming around and taking part in large-scale operations that will have significant impacts on the war in the fictional country of Modern Warfare 2 that the player is an integral part of. Developers want to take advantage of the power of next-gen consoles.

Quest Hunter is an Action-adventure game developed by N.Lion Ltd. Inspired by the mob-family quest games that were popular in the early '80s. Your mission is to explore the goings-on of the mob's worlds and investigate their motives, but beware, there are people out to stop you! As you make your way through the game there are certain collectibles and hidden items you may need to fulfill your mission. Challenge yourself to solve the numerous puzzles and to find the truth. Be the detective and bring justice to the criminal or criminal. It is up to you. Roughly 4 Hours to complete the game (though time can vary for some people) Key Features: Fantastic art and design Amazing original music A decent story A challenging and fun-rich gameplay that give you something new to experience every time you play Simultaneous electrocatalytic detection of uric acid and glucose at a single indium tin oxide electrode. Flexible electrochemical biosensors were fabricated by direct current (DC) reduction of an organic semiconductor, poly-3,4-ethylenedioxythiophene (PEDOT), with indium tin oxide (ITO) coated on polyester (PET) films. The immobilization of glucose oxidase (GOD), as a model enzyme for glucose sensing, was confirmed by UV-vis spectroscopy and cyclic voltammetry (CV). Uricase (UR) was immobilized by using the cross-linking agent of glutaraldehyde (GA) and 3-mercaptopropionic acid (3-MPA) on the PEDOT/ITO film. The electrocatalytic behaviors of glucose and uric acid at the biomolecules-immobilized PEDOT/ITO sensor were investigated using electrochemical techniques, including CV and differential pulse voltammetry (DPV). In addition to the direct conversion of glucose, a sensitive and simultaneous electrocatalytic reduction of uric acid was observed by the simultaneous detection of uric acid and glucose at the bio-electrode. The Future of Business in Space This year, the United States embarked on a path to establishing a permanent and robust presence in space. In 2000, the year the International Space Station was completed, the U.S. was the spacefaring leader in terms of population, scientific discovery, and the sheer power of its space program. This transition has been Validation of the short form of the Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale for low-income Hispanic American adults. A 2-wave panel design was employed to validate the Rosenberg Self-Esteem Scale for the low-income Hispanic American population. In Study 1, recruitment and participation rates were examined. Participants were 318 middle-aged Hispanic men and women. The Kuder-Richardson coefficient and Cronbach's alpha were .70. For Study 2, the predictive validity was assessed. Participants (n = 341) were male and female Hispanic adults in Mexican-American communities residing in the southwestern United States. Participants completed the Rosenberg scale for self-esteem, a demographics questionnaire, and an established instrument assessing health-risk behavior. It was hypothesized that high self-esteem scores would be positively associated with low-risk sexual behavior and high-risk alcohol use. The associations were evaluated using hierarchical regression analyses. Self-esteem scores were positively associated with less participation in high-risk sexual behaviors (p
