Using it a few times now, and it works great for my workflow. Not perfect, but definitely one of the better ones out there. Thanks, Jeff. If you are getting a "Missing License file" error message when you install Luxonix Purity 1.2.5, click here to download the license key for your version. For Windows XP users, you can get your v1.2.5 serial number and patch from here: Thank you Jeff. Your code works perfectly for me. You've saved me a ton of time. However, for what it's worth, when I test running the script on one track in my sample audio project, I notice that the audio is not exactly the same as before. The panning seems to change a bit. What is probably causing this and how do I fix it? your code is awesome... I've been trying to get the same effect using the Windows Audio Graph, and Windows Audio Plugins. I'm guessing that the 'art' track has a lot more parameters that are not included in your script, which you set to 0. I have a strange artifact in my audio that I can not remove. Any ideas on where I could find the file that tracks other parameters? thank you for your time! re: your recent reply. Thank you also for posting your sample project. I tried copying your script to a script in my project, and when I tested the script, it returned this error for each track (i.e. two tracks did not play) ABAutoTrance wrote: In my script, you can set a range of parameter or params as 0. From my experience, I found if you increase a parameter value past 0, the parameter will not be played, and I haven't noticed the values get overwritten. Jeff Not from my experience. It plays fine for me when the values are set to 0. In the script, I set the values to 2 for the pan and pans the audio to the left: If the problem is in the values you are using in the script, then you need to set the ValueRange in the script to cover the range of values that you are using. When I did this, I did not get that error. re: your reply to Christian's question. To your reply, I believe I understood you to be saying that there are other parameters in addition to the pan that you

This invention relates to a process for the treatment of aqueous compositions containing soluble salts of poly(alkylene glycol) polymers and to the use of this process for the treatment of such compositions. It is known from U.S. Pat. No. 4,496,707, issued Jan. 29, 1985 to H. Barry and G. Castellano, to use aqueous solutions of poly(alkylene glycol) polymers to wash particulates such as organic or inorganic species from the outside surfaces of porous or nonporous bodies. This process is important because it provides an economically attractive means for removing entrained materials which are otherwise not easily removed from the outer surfaces of, for example, glass, ceramic and polymeric articles, by conventional cleaning methods. As discussed in the above-mentioned patent, poly(alkylene glycol) polymers (hereinafter PAGs) can be prepared by the condensation of alpha, beta-ethylenically unsaturated dicarboxylic acids or anhydrides in the presence of basic catalysts. PAGs are normally solids or polymers, which have viscosities between that of water and that of a paste. The commercially available PAGs contain minor amounts of low molecular weight (i.e., less than 100 g/mol) poly(ethylene glycol) monomers. The PAGs show excellent high temperature stability and solubility and are excellent non-nucleating agents for silica, refractories, etc. The use of PAG as a non-nucleating agent is described in U.S. Pat. No. 4,094,852, issued June 13, 1978 to F. Padwa and G. Castellano. The commercially available PAGs e79caf774b
