. com/en/p/otn_dvidos-1/ Browsing toÂ .Q: How does clojure's threading support work? If you look at the documentation, it says that clojure can work with thread pools. But I can't figure out how.

Take for instance, the atomic-map extension: And this is the function implementation: (defn atom-map "Returns an atomic-map." [coll] (let [conc (atom {})] (go (doseq [m coll] (let [k (key m) v (val m)] (swap! conc conj [(key k) (val v)])))) @conc)) Can someone explain the mechanism? I'm very confused. A: The implementation you are quoting is just a fancy version of the following basic approach. (defn atom-map [coll] (let [conc (atom {})] (pool-manager) (map reduce #( + (:key %) (:value %)) coll) @conc)) Conc is the key which is used for locking. One atomic function is being used (map-reduce). The thread-pool is configured via pool-manager which is returned in the final line of the function. At this point, one thread is running map-reduce for every element in coll. map-reduce simply returns the new map with the return values of map and reduce in a new map. So we have the final result in conc at the end. Concurrent updates to conc are guarded by the lock on conc itself. Q: Ignoring a link in a div I have two links in a div link 1 link 2 link

Conflicts With Your Girlfriend Many women seek help from their girlfriends when they find themselves in the middle of a conflict. Is it time to make your girlfriend part of the process by consulting a family lawyer?
However, even couples with respectful and loving relationships face conflicts from time to time. Eric Ericson and Katy Clark discuss the best ways to resolve conflicts with your girlfriend. What constitutes a conflict with your girlfriend? Let's say you wake up one day and realize that your girlfriend has become more preoccupied than usual at work, or that she's been spending too much money, or that she won't set aside time for you to discuss your concerns. If you find yourself in the middle of one of these situations, you have every right to ask your girlfriend what's going on. That said, if you and your girlfriend have been dating for a long time or if the issues are more serious, you might want to approach her with a little more tact. Here are some tips for resolving your girlfriend's problems with a little less pressure. Communicate about your feelings. This is one of the most critical elements of resolving a girlfriend conflict. In order for the two of you to work together on the problem, you're going to need to be completely open about what's bothering you. Don't stuff your emotions; be completely up front about your feelings. Find her a trusted adviser. When you tell your girlfriend you're having problems at work or the house or with money, ask her to seek help. If she's not able to help you out of the situation herself, she's going to
