(71.38 MB)Å. The Secret Service has admitted failure to provide the security cameras on the White House fence that were shown in an hour-long Fox News "alert" that aired on the network on Thursday and quickly went viral. The network said the cameras provided by the agency and positioned to film the approach to the White House were not turned on and were unavailable at the time of the incident, which happened at 9:35 p.m. on March 5. According to Fox News's source, Secret Service employees tasked with watching the cameras did not notice the breach because the cameras enot turned on. The president's Daily Briefing was late that morning. A White House spokeswoman insisted that the only cameras on the West Wing's South Lawn at the time the breach was alleged were not working. "The Secret Service was in the process of replacing these cameras with the new model," the spokeswoman said. The Daily Briefing video was provided to the White House on Thursday and aired on Fox News at 9:35 p.m. The video, "An Unbelievable Security Breach," caused a sensation. "I think it's really hard to admit you've made a mistake and a security breach has happened inside the White House," said former Secret Service agent Shawn Turner, who also serves as president of the National Treasury Employees Union. "But this, as you know, is a deliberate breach by somebody who is either trying to do harm or make a political statement," he added. An internal investigation is under way, according to the Secret Service, but President Trump was not asked to comment on the video, sources said.Forbes CommunityVoice™ allows professional fee-based membership groups ("communities") to connect directly with the Forbes audience by enabling them to create content – and participate in the conversation – on the Forbes digital publishing platform.
