Field of the Invention The invention relates to a haptic feedback device, in particular, a haptic feedback device of touch screen. 2. Description of the Prior Art Recently, many kinds of touch screen have been developed and widely applied to computer products, in order to keep pace with multimedia integration. However, haptic feedback force is too weak. For example, when a user touches the screen via a finger, the force is small. As a result, when a user wants to have more precise and immediate feedback, there is a need for stronger haptic feedback force. Recently, feedback force applying method has been introduced, referring to FIG. 1A and FIG. 1B. The screen design disclosed in U.S. Pat. No. 6,266,105 provides a plurality of protrusions on the screen upper face. When a user touches the screen, the user receives the haptic feedback force from the screen. With this kind of structure, the protrusion is deflected and compressed by the touch, and the user receives a haptic feedback force. In addition, some touch screens can provide both the tactile feedback and the haptic feedback when the screen is touched. Thus, the user can get more direct feedback. Referring to FIG. 2A, FIG. 2B and FIG. 2C, some touch screens disclosed in Taiwan patent
