My review You can unzip it, and edit the info inside the. You can then copy the content of the file to a new folder, and make it your new startup disk. (See more, below.) But when you restart your Mac, you won't have the new startup disk. So we're going to tell you how to do it. And at the same time, how to make the startup disk work again. If your Mac is more than four years old, you can still use this tutorial. Because you'll need to use the old "Sharing" method. (But here's a better way, if your Mac is newer than that.) Here's how to fix your new startup disk. After the tutorial, you'll have a new startup disk called "Vue" in your "Disk Utility". Rebuild the "Library" folder. Make sure you're on "Macintosh HD". Do one of the following: - Remove "Vue" - Rebuild "Library" Rebuilding "Library" means moving all of the folders in the "Library" folder into a new "Vue" folder. Then you're ready to go. For the rest of the tutorial, we're going to assume that you're on "Macintosh HD". Sharing a startup disk But you know that you should use the "Sharing" method, instead. If your Mac is on "Macintosh HD", but you don't have a "Startup disk" selected in "System Preferences". Then you need to use the "Sharing" method. You won't be able to use the "Sharing" method by using the "Sharing" option on the "Applications" menu. But you can use the "Sharing" method by clicking on the "Macintosh HD" icon on the left side of the menu bar. The choices for sharing a disk should be "Sharing" or "None". But you can only share a disk with "Sharing" or "None". You can't share a disk with "File Sharing". So that's why we're going to use the "Sharing" method. In "System Preferences", select "Sharing". You should see the "Sharing"
