Think Thief meets Monkey Island. Took me about two hours to make just a small portion of the world. A: Not exactly what you're looking for, but it might give you some ideas on how to take the elements you've listed and turn them into a game of your own. The Travelling Rogue (Or as I like to call it: Trespassing) Basically you're a traveling rogue on a quest of some sort. You've stolen a mask, a pair of boots, some spare clothes and a pistol from somewhere. And you're on the run. Basic goal of the game Your goal is to get from the beginning to end of the game with as few obstacles as possible, and on your way you get to solve puzzles, interact with people, find loot, get rare stuff and meet some strange creatures. In the end you're rewarded with the mask, boots, clothes and the pistol you stole. Stuff you need A world The world should be procedurally generated, so that every game of Trespassing is different. Houses should have different layouts Banks should have different amounts of money People should have different occupations People should behave differently (talking to you differently) Loot should be scattered through the environment Puzzles Puzzles would be a good part of the game, but they don't have to be that puzzle-y, so it's up to you to make them that way. Your clues for the puzzles may be found in the environment, people, or just people making really weird sounds. You may have to dig up bodies, poke them in the eyes and see what happens to them, for example. Dealing with people Your position and actions towards people will have a major impact on the game. Talking to people is always optional, and it may make or break the whole game Blocking them in if you don't want them to see you Talking to them and asking about stuff if you're planning a robbery and want to know about the things they have Sneaking up on people to rob them You can steal money from people You can steal stuff from people You can steal equipment (clubs, cars) from people You can steal clothes from people You can hide stuff in people Running the law The law follows you. If you do something it gets reported to the police,

A game about creating, destroying, and escaping from one of many possible Sims universes. The simulations work by allowing the player to move around the inside of the universe to find and break the physics that create it. The environments are procedurally generated and change over time based on the player's input and choices. As you interact with the environment things get broken and changes happen: objects fall apart, glass is broken, and people get hurt. Each entity in the environment, people and stuff, has statistics that govern how they work. In the game there are 18 different entities: people, stuff, the law, and the player. Each of these entities has a set of 7 statistic: Strength, Intelligence, Reflexes, Physics, Speed, Health and Weapons. The player can interact with the game world in 3 different ways: through driving, jumping, and walking. Walking is both a useful way to move around the simulated world and a simple way to interact with objects.

- Follow in the footsteps of a lead detective
- Chase down the most wanted criminals in the city
- Your actions in this game will lead to the fate of a city

Re-envision the city through the eyes of a man with no memory Assume the role of Robert Kane, a man with no memory who must escape a simulation that keeps changing over time. You will need to read everything you come across. Use the clues given to you to survive and unlock your escape from this simulation. The opening sequence of the game runs for 7 days. During this time, the story will unfold. The story is imperfect but it can still be a fun game. If you can change the ending, please do so! Also I would love a to use the meshes of other games... If you liked this game, please leave a review

RPG! My name is DOCTOR MATHIAS. I believe in love, equality, the possibilities and the truth. These beliefs are what lead me into this roleplaying group. We wanna show the world that Polynesians can be kawaii and badass at the same time! Search Archive for the 'Platforms' Category People ask me all the time how they can get involved with the RPG. Since Platforms is done, there is nothing to do with the company, all we are left with to do are our different projects. One such project is the Polyverse Dev Discord. This discord is dedicated to all Polyverse projects. The plan right now is to develop select Dev Dicsons for certain projects we have been working on. This reduces the burden of development on DOCTOR. We can develop separately, and efficiently at that. We are currently working on Shadows of Shattered World Part 2, which is the sequel to Shroud of the Avatar. Our goal is to have this Out August 2017. We also have our Adult Content, which is all we are currently doing (AO3 Fanworks, cover art, companion, etc), and our Expansion content. Exchange In this whole time, I have always wanted to do my own content like Shroud of the Avatar. After reading the Witchdoctor's book, I have realized I should do my own RPG. Despite the fact, I am a teacher, I need to support myself. By creating my own RPG, I will be able to pay all my bills, and make money off of it. Therefore, I am starting up a Patreon, and will be able to afford that. Right now, I do not know what I want to roleplay, until I have written down my ideas. Sometimes though, it is just fun to roleplay one of the things I wanted to roleplay as a child. Recently, I have become much more interested in Fanfiction than gaming. Is that why I get so attached to my works? Because I'm fanfiction writer first and a gamer second? Is it my inner bias? I honestly don't know. I have read a lot of blogs of other fanfiction writers, and they have all said the same things. You can't write until you develop a storyline Lots of critics out there A lot of time So I have taken it upon
