released a special edition Volt that features a black finish on its body and chassis and a very simple paint scheme that reads, "Operation Lightning in Production Now". Mayor says the city's buyout plan is fair considering the city's distressed financial situation, saying the city would spend $15 million to close the gap on public employee salaries. By Napo Hong The city should accept responsibility for the income disparity that the fire department has faced in recent years, Plymouth Mayor Mark Poutivang said Friday, which prompted him to advocate for a citywide fire retiree's buyout plan. Last week, the State Court of Justice ruled that the city should pay $6.2 million to its active and reserve firefighters. The 2% pay raise for fiscal year 2015 also cost the city $1.3 million, along with the cost to pay firefighters' health insurance premiums. Mayor Mark Poutivang "I think the court's ruling that the government can do its legally – what they found to be legal, which is to give these pay raises," Poutivang said Friday during an announcement at City Hall. "If this is legally correct, then they are entitled to pay raises, but they should face the consequences of any additional costs as a result of that." In the buyout plan, the city has offered $20,000 to active firefighters and $9,000 for reserve retirees, excluding health benefits. The plan also allows active firefighters to work until they are 65 while reserve retirees will be permitted to retire. Each retiree will take a lump sum payment while they are eligible, then receive a monthly retirement payment for the rest of their lives. This savings on health insurance for active firefighters was considered important for the Plymouth Fire Department, given the department's financial strains. Poutivang hopes to complete a settlement within the next week. "It's absolutely a total win," he said. "If that doesn't help resolve the budget situation at the fire department, and resolve it rather than having to bring the people for a massive referendum on the water, I don't know." The buyout plan was an idea Poutivang developed after talking with various City Councilors and firefighters, and was shared with the city's officers, including Fire Chief Arlan E. Shivers, Aurora is a dream, Jake is a dream; They got each other's heart. In this prosperous Galactic Federation Planet, local residents are reluctant to mingle with new comers. The reason is simple, because no one knows how long these new comers will stay here. And Jake is one of them. Fortunately, Aurora does not care about this. As the saying goes, lovers are the most stupid people. Jake does not know Aurora is the President Rod's daughter until everyone around are discussing about their love relationship. Rod promised Jake, he would allow Aurora to marry this young man if he could succeeded in accomplishing "Silent Mission". "Silent Mission" sends gene enhanced special agents of Galactic Federation to holy place "Star Tower", which is created by ancient "Pioneers". It is the code to bring back "the Stone", the holy relic that controls spiritual world. Whoever controls "the Stone" shall control the spiritual world. However, human's genes cannot enter the Star Tower to touch "the Stone", even being conducted gene enhancement. The Silent Mission is a mission impossible for countless excellent special agents even by contributing their lives. Jake took this mission for an opportunity to being with Aurora in his life, but he did not realize this is a desperate game as well as the hidden conspiracy behind it. The real fight shall begin when Jake arrives at the "Star Tower".
