For indie game dev stories visit: For art from the game: Full credits & credits screen to this guy for 8 hours of work: Bloody hell! Just started playing this game and it is seriously addictive. The rhythm game stuff makes it so easy that I literally can't put the controller down. And the storyline is so crazy and detailed that I'm not even sure how to describe it. It has got an RPG vibe to it, then the art is extremely clean and detailed, and the controls are addictive, just like the music. On the technical side of things it's got pretty much all the stuff that I'd expect from a game like this, but the voice acting and overall story is just phenomenal. The only thing missing now is either more songs to play, or an option to change the speed/ordering of the songs. The chirping/dying/chorus parts are my absolute favourite part, love the weird melodies that play through out the song. Definitely should keep playing this game, can't wait to see what the next chapter holds. the ring. Since then Aris has been in jail. In Prison, he met Kyra and from then they became friends. Now, he ends up in the game's first level escaping. What's new in Gun On The Chickahominy:

- Speed Match Played at: Devlan's Sidewalk Map Players: 10 Event Size: L, 55 mins, with 30 mins Ranked Absolute Warzone Points: None Prizes: None I did this event after ranking up a bit in the Absolute Warzone rewards. One trick I figured out in Absolute Warzone while trying to learn was how to drop like a boss. Jump a bit, drop, run/backflip! While not elite or super fancy, it can beat almost any player by making them drop it is how you get the win. This event is more about displaying skill and reducing the number of new players. So find someone you can beat, and run them to death. The easier they are to beat the better. This one is pretty basic. We've done this type of Parkour before and I feel pretty sure I could run this event in an afternoon with minimum training. It's a little different than the events we usually do though, as we are doing speed run, not the standard time. Check out the player standings here. Look for the orange players, they won't be going any further. Rally Time: During the play, select the

the box next to speed, enter 6. This tells the countdown how fast to go. If you read around the leaderboard there are different amounts given to various players, depending on time. What to do to win: Time yourself and watch the leaderboard. If you are ahead of the lead when time is up, win! If you are on the tail, get there while they are still sprinting. Last second wins are the worst in Absolute Warzone, as players have less time to think about their pace. So if you are at the back you might need to win this event at a full sprint, or bust. The Clean Energy Jobs Act would require all major privately owned construction projects in the state to include 10 percent of their construction costs for renewable energy sources. The proposal, introduced by Senator Carl Kruger, MPA, would also create a State Energy Office on the University of Montana campus which would direct zero-emissions projects such as wind, solar, biomass and geothermal into public and private markets. “Our number one priority has been to include in the state’s Conservation Bill a measure that will promote and support renewable energy in Montana,” said Kruger. “We can use large amounts of wind energy to heat water for our schools and businesses and offset our electric bills. The legislation would require the state’s major construction
