Installing Photoshop Photoshop is available in two versions: Photoshop Classic and Photoshop CS. Many organizations require (and many businesses still do) that new products must use the Photoshop CS version. Because of this, Photoshop CS is the best version to go with for beginner users. It has many tutorials and step-by-step instructions to get you up and running quickly in no time. You can also get Photoshop CS at a much lower price than Photoshop Classic. Both versions of Photoshop come in a multitude of languages, which can be helpful if you are not a fluent English speaker, or if you are developing an international product. Essential Photoshop features You can use Photoshop to manipulate images for graphic design, video and print, but Photoshop isn't just about editing and altering images; it can also create new images from scratch. Photoshop has the tools necessary to create beautiful images, whether you are creating images for a web site, promotional poster or high-resolution printed materials. There are so many features available in Photoshop that we could write an entire book on just what Photoshop can do. It's very helpful to be familiar with some of these features, so you can explore them to see what they offer: + 1. Bring up the Photoshop menu by pressing the F11 key (Windows) or Cmd+F11 (Mac) Menu This menu has a large number of choices that help you to get started, or to perform the tasks you need to get the job done. The Adobe logo at the top of the menu represents the advanced features of the program, while the image editing tools are in the bottom row. Faster Editing The image editing menu includes several tools that can be used to manipulate your images. The Layers Panel The Layers Panel allows you to add, arrange and manipulate the layers in your image in both simple and complicated ways. To open the Layers Panel, click on the Layers icon at the left of the Layers Panel, or to resize the Layers Panel, hold down your Shift key and then click and drag to resize. Once you bring up the Layers Panel, click on the New Layer icon at the top left of the panel to create a new layer. To remove a layer, click on the eye icon to the left of the layer in the Layers Panel, or to close the layer, click on the

Q: How to work with gps points in iOS I'm a new developer and I need to develop a gps app for my car (in iOS). I've been searching a lot on the internet, but I'm still confused. When a user is in his car and press a button, a new point will be created and I should be able to save all those points in a list. When the user presses another button I want to take all those points and make a route, for example, only using this points. So, I need to get the points in real time, and I'm looking for the easiest way to do that. I have experience with Android, but I need to make this project in iOS only. I don't know if I made myself clear, I need to know if it's possible (or how) to do this and if it's a simple process. Any help will be welcome. Thanks A: After reading a bit about location services, I decided to use the CoreLocation framework and make a function that gets the location. Then it will be easy to store points, distances and other information in a NSArray. Q: Why is my javascript lightbox not working I have an image gallery in my website where I used lightbox.js for the images. For some reason the lightbox is only showing the first image, and none of the others. Here is a link to the link: Why is this? I don't understand. I am using Firefox as my browser. I also have an example link of what I am talking about, but I have no idea how to use it correctly. It is it a picture of a blow up toy. Here is the javascript: `$(document).ready(function() { $('#lightbox').fancybox(); });` HTML:

Q: Clipping polygon in list of polygons, where each polygon is given a random orientation I've got a list of polygons and I want to clip the middle ones out, but the only way to clip a single polygon to another is through their orientation (which I'd like to make random if possible). All the objects are in one or two dimensions. If it's easier, I can always just box them all into a single 2D polygon. I'd like to try and keep it as general as possible, but I haven't managed to come up with any way of doing this at all. If I make a list of the vertices that make up the middle sections of the polygons I can use the Pythagorean theorem to find the area of the polygons (and thus it's total area) but I haven't figured out how to use this to calculate the vertices the polygons make up or how to find the midpoints. Any help or pointers to code would be much appreciated. Thanks! EDIT: I'd like to emphasize the fact that the polygons are all identical. I just want to clip the odd one out at random. Also, each polygon has an arbitrary orientation, i.e. the polygon doesn't have to be the horizontal line of a chessboard, it could be 45 degrees off at any point A: So I figured out how to do it. For the sake of easy reading, I'll include the code that does the clipping. This is a list of polygon orientations: `[(1,0),(-1,0),(0,1),(0,-1)] #[(1,0),(1,1),(0,0),(0,1)] #[(1,0),(-1,-1),(0,0),(0,-1)]` And this is the clipping procedure: # Get the area of each polygon, and then sum these up. The sum of the areas # will be the total area of the clipped polygons. This will be the next number # assigned to the original polygons. for polygon in polygons: area = (polygon[0]*polygon[1]) # The indexes will be increasing so that the sum of the areas will be largest. #
