Immunocytochemical distribution of glucocorticoid, mineralocorticoid and androgen receptors in human benign and malignant mammary tumors. The hormone receptors of glucocorticoids, mineralocorticoids and androgens, responsible for their known antitumor activity in experimental systems, have been examined in benign and malignant human mammary tumors of several histologic types.
There was no significant difference in the incidence of nuclear staining for receptors for any of the hormones examined among the benign tumors. Immunocytochemical staining for glucocorticoid and mineralocorticoid receptors was detected in adenocarcinomas and fibroadenomas with the highest receptor density seen in the stromal cells. There was an increase in the intensity and distribution of staining

Noli me .San Francisco gets out-of-this-world views When you're looking for the world's best views of the night sky, it makes sense to head to San Francisco. As the planet's first city to reach the face of the Earth on Jan. 1st, 1849, the city perched on the beautiful San Francisco Bay stretches 17 miles from the tip of the Golden Gate Bridge to the Presidio of the Golden Gate National Park. While San Francisco is less than five miles from one of the most active volcanoes in the world, Mount St. Helens, its residents have a bounty of night sky views that rivals those of the polar caps. At the foot of the Bay Bridge is the famous Twin Peaks — the most photographed landscape in North America. This breathtaking attraction is only a mile away from the panorama-viewing 2,000-foot-high Transamerica Pyramid (once the tallest building in the Western Hemisphere). The city's stunning views are made possible by the presence of the Army Coast Artillery Corps and its observation post, built on a hill that overlooks the bay in the early 1900s. According to the San Francisco Chronicle, the Army sent correspondence from its own observatory to the Royal Astronomical Society around 1910, declaring the Golden Gate Bridge, the Monet-like headlights of automobiles and the twinkling lights on houses as the city's first major astronomical accomplishments. But that's not all the Army had to offer. They also installed a telescope capable of taking pictures from the moon to Neptune. Their master of technology was famed astrophotographer Edward Emerson Barnard. Just before the new century came, however, the U.S. Army chose to pack up and move. All the equipment went to Huntsville, Ala., where it can be found today at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center. what the hell is going on with this fucking bullshit????? what does ZZ, ZE, YY, and Y mean?? who is this guy and what the fuck is this shit? do i have a math and English double or something? wtf is up with this fucking bullshit????? what the hell is going on with this fucking bullshit????? what does ZZ, ZE, YY, and Y mean?? who
