The world was overrun by a mysterious virus called "Pestilence" and no one could stop it. A government program known as "The Project" sent a large group of mobile androids out to the wilderness to find survivors in one week. Unfortunately, the space ships malfunctioned and landed in the middle of nowhere. The Project couldn't find a new place to send them and was forced to set them loose in this lonely outpost as their final option.

The Famed Group The three legendary factions that are the terror of the wasteland were formed out of this program. These three factions are known for being stronger than others, and are ranked from #1 to #3 within the wasteland.

#1. RAINBOW DISPERSAL The Red and Black are bickering with each other, having blood ties. They are the largest of the three factions. The Black builds their bases high up in the mountains, while the Red builds in the middle of the mountains, and there lies their fighting grounds. A mysterious tower filled with static, a lonely AI, and a man with dark past. Static is a psychological thriller, horror adventure and mystery all rolled into one. You are trapped in a tower full of static, haunted by the past and dealing with a nightmare that refuses to go away. This is the story of a lonely man in a closed world, dealing with the past he cannot escape, and the static that never sleeps. You built this tower from the ground up, everything inside, from the AI to the building layout is by your design. You worked hard to ensure that you had the premiere residence in the city of Umbriol, but now, why is everyone gone? You wake

The prognostic value of ambulatory blood pressure in elderly men: the Caerphilly study. The prognostic value of ambulatory blood pressure in elderly men was examined in a population-based study of 1,138 men aged 69 to 79 years. They were followed up for 15 years, during which time 574 deaths occurred. In a multivariate analysis the predictors of mortality were: heart rate, systolic blood pressure, total serum cholesterol and presence of proteinuria. Age, cigarette smoking, race and socioeconomic status were not independent predictors. After controlling for other predictors of mortality, the relationship between 24-hour ambulatory blood pressure and mortality remained statistically significant. The prognostic power of mean daytime systolic blood pressure was higher than that of the mean diastolic pressure or the minimum or maximum systolic or diastolic pressures. There was no evidence that the prognostic significance of ambulatory blood pressure was dependent on whether the blood pressure reading was obtained in the morning or evening. When the subjects were divided into hypertensives and normotensives, blood pressure variability as determined by SD of the diastolic or systolic blood pressure was a better prognosticator of mortality than either blood pressure or the absolute level of the blood pressure.

& Women in Space by Christopher Blair The Sky Shall Now Be Filled by Christopher Blair Book Review by Sadu Ruth (March 24, 2014) One of the purposes of the men's magazines and how-to books is to teach men how to be good husbands, fathers, and lovers. One can hardly blame them. Who wants to live an unhappily married life? But we can certainly hold men responsible for destroying our planet Earth! The New Industrial Revolution is not just the product of the scientific community. It is the product of the economic interests of the corporate world. They have leveraged the natural resources of the Earth: no matter how hard they try to clean up their mess they cannot. The industrialist male of our time is simply a modern day slave owner. He has taken upon himself to do the Lord's work of pimping and propping up the female to stay in line or else be killed. They have laundered the earth's finances to the tune of trillions of dollars...no wonder they have leeched the country dry of its wealth. My brother, Miss Ruth, not only read my book, but bought her first copy at a small bookstore's yard sale. She found something to my liking; The Third Wave would probably sell 20,000 copies by the end of the year, and as much as 100,000 copies during the subsequent two years. I was suddenly on the cover of these magazines: the "Young Millionaire", "Young Entrepreneur", "Mayflower" magazine, "Maggie's Everyday Fashion", "Amanda's Cooking Bible", "Topps All-Star Baseball Cards", "Maggie's Easy French Recipes"... Not only this, they published my work two more times after that to shoot me higher up the magazine charts. I almost expected to get a phone call demanding my presence at the UN. I was left with a feeling like Paul Newman in "Cool Hand Luke" or Alford in "Driving Miss Daisy." I am still waiting for a movie deal to be born out of my life. I am told there are plans for the movie version of my story so I am going to pay this some attention someday. However, the author has some money problems with a falling house and other debts. Let's not wait for Hollywood to enjoy the Treadmill by Hydelic is one of the best rhythm games we've played yet. The music, gameplay, and presentation are all spot-on, and the game is already one of my favorites of the year." -GamesBeat "The studio has been on quite a run lately. From Idle Fish, to Adventures of Pip and Bob, to The Vanishing of Ethan Carter. This new game, The Rhythm Treadmill, is a mix of everything that Hydelic has done so far. Where the previous titles all had "tourist" areas, this game has everything happening at the same time. You're constantly going from upbeat and bright, to dark and dreary, and then back again, all within a single level. I've enjoyed watching it all go down in my small degree of
