This is the easiest way to get connected with the web on your phone. And now, it's also available to download for free. For those of you who aren't already familiar with Firefox for Android, the browser was originally only released in closed alpha. It was designed with two goals in mind - to be lighter and faster than the other mobile browsers on the market and also to have a streamlined interface which helps you quickly navigate the web. As part of the new beta programme, Firefox for Android will be free to download and it'll be available from the Google Play store. Firefox for Android comes with some unique features for the platform which allow it to be more useful to the mobile user than the other more widely used browsers in town. It's optimized for mobile devices with smaller screen sizes, so that means you get a better experience when you're connected with a 4.7-inch screen or smaller. With that in mind, Firefox's new interface is designed to maximize browsing efficiency and make it possible to get the most from your mobile phone. As part of the beta programme, the browser doesn't have all of the features available on the desktop edition of Firefox yet. You'll get a handy quick navigation bar, though, which allows you to switch between sites quickly. This feature 6d1f23a050
