the default script for the newrelic marketplace integration is a generic, infrastructure-wide contact subscription. for example, if you are setting up new servers in a data center, you might choose to give the newrelic agents access to all of your environments. this means that they will have an account on each server as well as on your instance. { 'name' => 'bob' 'email' => 'bob@example.com' 'identity' => { 'method' => 'email', 'email' => 'bob@example.com' } } this config will cause a newrelic.agent on server.example.com to be subscribed to the account bob@example.com. no other servers will see this configuration but will be subject to normal contact subscription rules. since the scripts also update the "networks" table, you'll also need to use the networks class in conjunction with your add-on. when creating a new newrelic.agent add-on, use the modules initialization function to load the networks module. module newrelic class agent def initialize(properties) @networks = networks.new(properties) end end end once the agent has been configured, the first time the agent is contacted, the newrelic.agent will have its own networks configured. it is important to include this settings section. { 'name' => 'bob', 'email' => 'bob@example.com', 'networks' => { 'net1' => { 'type' => 'internal' }, 'net2' => { 'type' => 'external' } }, 'identity' => { 'method' => 'email', 'email' => 'bob@example.com' } } this will create separate networks for each instance. if you just specify a host name or environment name, all instances will be covered.
