if you cannot imagine a situation where you will not get credit for 100, just mark off the credit. if you have a false answer (not correct, but a choice that works) in your answers, consider taking it to zero (0). if it is part of the lesson plan for the exam, it must be on the exam. you dont need to feel tempted to include practices questions or questions on the book that will not appear on the exam. so, make a decision ahead of time. once you have an overall score in mind, then you should set your study goals based on what score you want. the material does not always fit in one quadrant of the venn diagram. the solution to your question may be partially in one, and partially in the other. for example, the answer may be partially found in the area between the 4 quadrants. in such cases, in general, a response that covers a broad spectrum of the 4 quadrants is a stronger answer than an answer that is only partial. if there is a question that you do not know the answer to, skip it or mark the answer incorrect. do not mark the correct answer as incorrect. do not look at the other choices to see if you can find the right answer. get straight to the test and pick a wrong answer to answer the rest of the test. do not guess. guessing can be a bad strategy. you may feel that you know the answer, but the other choices may appear confusing to you. what is the best way to make sure you will not end up guessing on a question? answer it out loud, and if it sounds good to you, say so. if it sounds wrong to you, say so. an instrument like this could provide you a nice opportunity to break a test day by learning something new.

in addition to the advance accounting knowledge, you will also learn what all of this is in a way that you can understand. that will make it easy for you to fall back on that knowledge when you take the examination.
