Root Explorer Root Explorer: Root Explorer is one of the best app to manage Android phone files.Game 5 of the World Series begins at 4:07 p.m. ET Thursday. Timing is a bit weird because Game 4 was today, and Game 3 was yesterday. Fox is also airing an hourlong show tonight at 8 p.m. ET — the NBA conference finals between the Miami Heat and Oklahoma City Thunder. My prediction for the rest of the night: Houston Astros 16, Los Angeles Dodgers 7 (4:07 p.m. ET) This is going to be ugly. Game 5 was ugly — the best game of the World Series, in my opinion — and now a knockout game. The Astros beat the Dodgers, 9-7, last night to even the series and win their first title since the 2005 National League Championship Series. They took Game 4, 12-5, and won a rematch with the Dodgers, 3-0, in Game 3. The Astros are probably going to win another game or two in L.A., and it’s not hard to imagine them winning three or four, and one of the series going to seven or eight. There’s a chance the Dodgers go into extra innings, and they’re good enough that it could happen. But the Astros are still the best team in baseball, and they’re far too good to lose this title the same way they lost Game 7 in the NLCS. The Dodgers entered the Series with confidence from their NL West title — they were 16-8 after winning the first two games in Houston — and they were able to close this thing in seven games. The Astros went 14-9 after winning the first two in L.A. I have no idea who’s going to win, but I’m going with the Astros. They’re too good to lose three straight, and the Dodgers are just a bad team right now. I don’t see their postseason coming to an end in such a fashion. And I think the Astros have enough offensive firepower — the team is first in the majors in runs scored and second in slugging percentage — to beat the Dodgers. At 8 p.m. ET, Fox will show the NBA conference finals between the Miami Heat and Oklahoma City Thunder. The Heat are playing the San Antonio Spurs, who lost Game 4 and are one loss away from being eliminated. “Golden State is just a better team,” Durant told reporters Wednesday. “But we’ll see what happens,” he said, “because I think we still have a good shot.” Houston Astros 16
