This feature allows you to tap your tablet screen with either a pointer or your finger, and Lightroom provides various solutions to the image on the screen immediately. For example, when you tap on an image, it preloads the basic text edits. You can also tap once on an image to expand the view so you can make edits and then tap again to make the results as well as the rest of the image view smaller. When you view the results, Lightroom keeps the zoom level where you left it.

The other new feature is Live Edits, which means that, as you make changes, the new profile is instantly applied to the image. They don't have to refresh the display or leave the application.
