Borrowing a lot of their functionality from the popular Notepad++, Rinzo XML Editor is a simple tool that you can use to edit XML files and make small changes to them. The app has the same look and feel as Notepad++, and you won't even notice that it is an app at all. As with its other features, Rinzo XML Editor offers you a large number of functionalities to handle XML files, including cut/copy/paste and search options. Easy to use Although Rinzo XML Editor is very basic, it is still easy to use. It is very intuitive and offers a very clean user interface. You can perform all actions on a file without opening it first. This is a nice feature that is missing in the most of the other XML editors that I've used so far. It should be mentioned that it is very hard to make mistakes when editing XML files using this tool. There are just two buttons to the left of the file view area, and they do not have the same functionality as those found in Notepad++. As far as I know, Rinzo XML Editor is the only XML editor that offers this kind of functionality. The app is free to use, and offers you a clean, well designed and easy to use app for handling XML files. ShineItz - Turbo Translator Description: ShineItz - Turbo Translator is a text to speech application that will allow you to hear translations of text as you type them. The app will be able to read any type of text, including, but not limited to, emails, files, chat messages and Wikipedia pages. If you click on a word that is not a valid translation, the app will give you a list of suggestions as you type the word. The application will also work with a 'target' word and will automatically add the information to that word. For example, clicking on the word 'Apple' will automatically replace it with 'fruit'. Speech transcription This app will allow you to create speech files that you can use in emails. It is very easy to do, and you can customize the app according to your needs. The app will open the speech file in Notepad and you can choose to edit it or just copy it to your computer's clipboard. The feature that I like the most about this app, however, is the speech transcribed. Clicking on the microphone icon will show you the text that has been spoken. 2edc1e01e8
