The association between atherosclerotic burden and atrial fibrillation has been noted; however, studies have not demonstrated an association between aortic valve annular calcification and atrial fibrillation. The aim of our study was to explore the relationship between aortic valve annular calcification and atrial fibrillation. This was a retrospective analysis of 120 consecutive patients with aortic valve annular calcification who were on outpatient follow-up for ≥1 year between January 2009 and December 2014. The primary outcome was the number of times patients went to the emergency department (ED) or were admitted to the hospital for atrial fibrillation or flutter. The secondary outcomes were the number of times the patients had a cardioversion or catheter ablation of atrial fibrillation or flutter, the initial and subsequent ED visits, and the number of times cardiovascular procedures were performed (eg, percutaneous coronary intervention or balloon aortic valvuloplasty). The primary outcomes occurred in 66%
