updatesPhase I trial of epirubicin and

gemcitabine combination in patients with advanced solid tumors. We investigated the toxicity and efficacy of an epirubicin/gemcitabine

combination in patients with advanced solid tumors. Between January

1998 and May 1999, 28 patients were enrolled to this combination trial.

The starting dose of epirubicin was 45 mg/m², and gemcitabine was administered on days 1 and 8 at 800 mg/m². Dose escalation was performed in cohorts of 3 patients to a maximum of 1000 mg/m² gemcitabine (days 1 and 8) and 100 mg/m² epirubicin (days 1, 8, and 15). No dose-limiting toxicity was observed. The most common grade 3 or 4 hematological toxicities were grade 3 leukopenia (13.5%) and grade 3 thrombocytopenia (7.1%). Nonhematological toxicity included grade 1-2 nausea, vomiting, and stomatitis; the only grade 3 nonhematological toxicity was grade 3 liver dysfunction in one patient. The recommended doses were considered to be epirubicin 60 mg/m² and gemcitabine 1000 mg/m² (days 1 and 8). Three patients with breast cancer (including 2 with soft-tissue metastases and 1 with cerebral metastases) showed a partial response. We observed a good activity
